swissQprint: The future of large format printing

Visitors to Fespa 2025 in Berlin will discover the new swissQprint flatbed range. A completely redesigned mechanical foundation, 23% higher output and 10 colour channels for extended versatility are the prime features. Also in the spotlight: the Karibu roll to roll printer and a wide-ranging application gallery.

Supported by its worldwide distribution network, swissQprint will be showing visitors to Fespa in hall 27, stand C60, how they can reposition their business and operate with high profitability.

The Swiss manufacturer will be presenting their full range in Berlin from 6 to 9 May 2025. Two printers represent the new generation of machines with which swissQprint heralded a new era in flatbed printing this January: The successful Nyala model, now in the 5th generation and 23% faster than its predecessor, as well as the high-end Kudu flatbed printer, now with a maximum output of 341 m<sup>2</sup>/h.

Best experienced live

"These printers' combination of productivity and precision is best seen to be believed. The same is true of their multifunctionality and versatility. In addition to various add-on options, they offer ten freely configurable colour channels," says Adriano Gut, Key Account Manager at swissQprint.

The dedicated roll to roll printer on the stand, Karibu, is set to surprise with its unique features aimed at high efficiency along with exceptional capabilities such as varnish embellishment and haptic prints that would normally be expected only from flatbed printing.

Visitors will discover a colourful variety of inspiring flatbed and roll-to-roll printing applications – neon printing included – at printing demonstrations as well as in themed application worlds. They will also learn about the reliability and longevity that contribute to swissQprint systems' high ROI.
